ABSTRACT

Method and apparatus are provided for compressing and decompressing data representing a 3D unit vector. X, Y, and Z components are derived from the vector data and a determination made as to the octant in which that vector falls from a number of possible octant pairs. The vector is then scaled with a scaling factor and compressed data values are derived from the octant pair data and scaled vector data.